Writing

Kerry was sitting at the school table with a sad, exhausted look, his eyes ^{were} full of tears. - "Come on Kerry, your dog could not go so far, I'm sure it'll be at your doors by the end of the day" - said Bill. Kerry and Bill were best friends since the first grade and both of them always could rely on each other.

Today Kerry's dog ran away from him and since then Kerry couldn't find it. The golden retriever just ran on high speed from the boy. - "What am I going to do if she's gone forever? I should go now and find her!" - said Kerry confidently. Although Jessie (that was the dog's name) was a smart one, she was so uncontrollable. - "Or, but don't you think you're going to do this alone!" - said Bill with a wink.

Boys made their way to the park and started looking for the missing pet. Bill were asking strangers if they had seen the dog and Kerry called dog's name loudly. After two hours of useless attempts to find Jessie they came to the Kerry's house.

The time went so slowly. Bill tried his best to change Kerry's pessimistic mood telling him jokes of all kinds.

Suddenly they heard loud barking outside. - "Jessie?" - Boys jumped up from sofa and made their way to the door. When Kerry opened the door his dog ran to him with happy barking. - "Jessy you scared me so much, never do this again to me!" - said Kerry hugging her dog. After releasing his dog from a tight hug, he turned to his friend "Bill if you weren't beside me, I would gone mad, thank so much for helping!"

- "Oh that's ok, that what are friend are for" - replied Bill.
