Writing

Fear in the forest.

This story happened two years ago when Mark and his friends went camping in the forest. He said to them that it was a bad idea because back in that day all TV programmes have been talking about wild animals in the forest, but his friends didn't listened to him. Half way to the camp site and Mark's legs were already been hurt and he wanted to eat, but they forced him to go on. They got there late, so they've decided to build a camp fire. So Mark got his friend John to help him find some sticks and stones. It wasn't that hard so they found them easily, but they got lost and it was already get dark in the forest. They couldn't go back because they couldn't see anything, so Mark panicked and desperately started shaking John and screaming at him. But then John also got scared as they heard strange foot steps, which sounded like an animal's steps. Mark started crying, but John didn't want to give up so he picked a big rock so he could defend them. Footsteps were getting closer and closer, Mark lost all his hope and gave up. But then they saw another friend - Eugene, he was worried about them because they were late. He looked at Mark and started laughing at him. "You thought I was an animal!" - he said. Then Mark rushed to Eugene and hugged him. He was glad to see someone else. Later they got back to the camp site and explained everything to all of the friends there. At the end of the day they all went to sleep. Mark said to himself that he won't go camping ever again.
